Another was to prohibit the trade or manufacture of arms and munitions of war by private establishments. The report adds that the association should impose upon the central powers, by the peace treaty, limitations of armaments and control of their manufacture to permit members of the society to reduce immediately and substantially their military establishments.

Even if the effort to secure final action by the conference before the president's departure fails, it is considered by active sponsors that ultimate success of the undertaking already has been assured through adoption by the full conference of a declaration which solemnly binds the delegates to the creation of the society of nations with the primary object of avoiding further warfare.

Owen Dougherty and Richard Finn, in the Gold Mountain district. The property comprises nine claims and forms one of the choicest groups in the entire district as it lies directly west of the Brougher Divide and on the strike of the great ledge system of that district. Among those interested in the property are J. E. Adams and Frank Manson, manager of the Western Ore Purchasing company, two of the best known mining investors in southern Nevada and men whose names have always spelled success in whatever they have undertaken.

Steps have been taken to install one of the finest equipments on the Divide so that no time will be lost in getting underway and down to the mineralized zone. The buyers closed with W. J. Tobin, of the Pioneer Reorganized company for immediate delivery of a 50-hp electric hoist which is now in Goldfield and an eight-drill compressor. These purchases indicate better than anything else that the company is planning an energetic campaign.

PAST EXALTED RULERS NIGHT
BLUE RIBBON EVENT WITH ELKS

One of the blue-ribbon events on the calendar takes place tonight at the home pasture of the Tonopah Elks. By decree of the Grand Lodge of the order, one night in the month of February each year is designated as past exalted ruler's night, and this is the night. Thus is opportunity afforded for certain retired members of the antlered herd, those who have finished their courses and achieved the honor of filling the highest position in their respective lodges, to show to their brother Elks at tonight's meeting just how things were done in their day and how they should be done now. It is therefore with much glee and a large measure of curiosity and expectancy that the present officers of Tonopah lodge will lay aside their duties for the evening and, with deferential bows, make way for the distinguished old-timers who are privileged on this one occasion to take their places and usurp their functions.

As there aren't quite enough past exalted rulers of Tonopah lodge living here to go round, it has been necessary to call upon several local brother Elks of the same rank in sister lodges to fill some of the chairs.

The presiding officer of the evening will be Joseph F. Gori, exalted ruler of Tonopah lodge in 1914-15, during whose administration two of the present officers of 1912 were initiated. It was during Gori's term of office as exalted ruler that Tonopah lodge enjoyed one of the most active and prosperous years of its history.

The other officers of the lodge will be filled for the occasion by the following Elks from among the local ranks of past exalted rulers: Esteemed leading knight, Milton M. Ditch, first exalted ruler of Goldfield lodge, No. 1072, year 1907-8; esteemed loyal knight, Elbert W. O'Connell, of Tonopah lodge, year 1913-14; esteemed lecturing knight, Henry C. Schmidt, of Tonopah lodge, year 1910-11; esquire, A. H. Keenan, of Tonopah
